Situation Overview

Extreme weather conditions, including avalanches, floods, and heavy snowfall have affected 33 provinces of Afghanistan as of 3 February 2017. Badakhshan and Nooristan provinces were severely hit by two avalanches, resulting in casualties and destruction of houses, followed by flash floods on 18 February that significantly impacted Herat, Zabul and Nimroz provinces.

An estimated 8,209 families were reportedly affected across Afghanistan, with 202 deaths and 127 persons sustaining injuries across the country. The majority of the reported caseloads have been assessed, with a total 3,439 families in need of assistance, while the distribution of relief items is underway and expected to be completed by 15 March 2017.

Snow and flash floods damaged major roads in Afghanistan, delaying assessments and the dispatching of relief assistance to affected families. Rescuers were unable to reach snow-hit districts in the north, northeast, central, central highland, west, and eastern regions. The majority of the highways and roads linking to various districts that were initially closed have since reopened; however, some roads to districts in Badakhshan, Nooristan, Daikundi, Bamyán and Paktika are still closed.

When the relief items were delivered to 53 avalanche displaced families, the team identified 28 additional families that were displaced as a result of an avalanche in Dasht e Manzil village. On 21 February, IOM dispatched additional relief items for the 28 families via helicopter. In total, 81 families were assisted with the provision of winter clothing, blankets, and solar lanterns while ANDMA and FOCUS also distributed cash and other relief items.
