	IOM's CCCM team assessed more than 130 collective centres in Ivano-Frankivsk Region and over 100 in Vinnytsia Region. In close coordination with local authorities and linked to plans for the re-opening of educational facilities in September, IOM is now revising the list of centres that will be prioritized for support. In Kharkiv Region, multisectoral assessments were launched in order to better understand local needs.
	During the reporting period, IOM teams concluded Shelter/WASH interventions in nine collective centres in Dnipropetrovsk, Zakarpattia, Lviv and Chernivtsi regions, assessed 24 further centres for shelter needs and continued repair works in 16 centres. IOM aims to address the identified needs, including required sanitary equipment, the installation of washing machines and boilers, or the repair of toilets and shower rooms, with its mobile teams.
	As part of its WASH response, IOM distributed hygiene items and items for the cleaning and disinfection of sites during the reporting period, reaching over 1,500 people in need. IOM met with municipality and regional authorities as well as with water utility representatives in Vinnytsia, Kyiv, Poltava and Kharkiv regions to discuss water rehabilitation projects, winterization, and priority locations for IOM interventions.
	IOM continues to visit and assess border crossing points (BCPs) to shape interventions towards safe cross-border mobility and enhanced preparedness in coordination with Ukrainian border authorities. New envisaged activities include multisectoral support on border crossing points with Poland and Moldova.
	IOM continued providing key primary healthcare services through IOM mobile clinics, with implementing partners Medical Aid Committee in Zakarpattia (CAMZ), Sheptytsky Hospital and UK MED, including general consultations and treatment of non-communicable and communicable diseases, basic trauma care, referrals for specialized cases, psychological first aid support and hygiene promotion, including health education. In addition, psychologists provided individual and group counselling, alongside mental health awareness sessions, and offered coping techniques to those in need. During the reporting period, 1,269 medical as well as 670 psychological consultations were provided.
	In cooperation with the Ministry of Health of Ukraine, crisis psychologists of the IOM Emotional Support Hotline, which is providing remote emotional support, have been conducting a series of online trainings for practitioners from different government hotlines. These trainings support the initiative of the First Lady of Ukraine, Olena Zelenska, on the National Programme for Mental Health and Psychosocial Support.

VOICES FROM UKRAINE

Maria is a displaced person whose routine became more comfortable when a collective centre she stays in received a new washing machine and a dryer from IOM. With her son, Maria fled Sievierodonetsk in Luhansk Region in March. Now, due to the destruction, the uncertain security situation and the mandatory evacuation from eastern regions, they are facing protracted displacement.

So, step by step her family is adjusting to their temporary home in Vinnytsia and small improvements in the quality of life make this challenging process easier.

Collective centres in central and western regions of Ukraine hosting people fleeing the war have already received more than 240 washing machines and dryers, as well as washing powder and other sanitary and hygiene items from IOM, while the distributions are still ongoing. Displaced persons living in schools and dormitories can use this IOM-provided equipment free of charge and feel more comfortable in their temporary home. The need to wash and dry clothing, particularly given the upcoming winter, supports all displaced persons to live in conditions of dignity with improved hygiene and health indicators. Parents with young children have particularly expressed gratitude to IOM for these items.
